SENATOR TOWNSEND RAPS PRESIDENT

Says Influence Wielded By Wilson Nearest Approach to Undue Influence

CRITICISES COMMITTEE

Committee is Criticised for Not Asking Senators Whether Wilson Had Influenced Them

SENATOR MAKES NO CHARGES

WASHINGTON, JUNE 6.—An unexpected turn was given the senate's lobby investigation late today when Senator Townsend of Michigan, Republican, declared on the stand that the influence wielded by President Wilson and by the Democratic secret caucus, upon the making of the tariff bill, constituted the nearest approach to undue influence upon members of congress that the investigating committee would be able to find.

Senator Townsend criticised the committee for not having asked members of the senate whether the president had sought to influence them and declared that even though the president had not intended if his recent denunciation of "lobbies" working in support of changes in the tariff would not force certain senators to vote against amendments they knew to be just. The two Democratic members of the committee present, Senators Reed and Walsh, indignantly resented any intimation that President Wilson had used patronage or threats to force any one to support free sugar or free wool or to support the bill as a whole.

Senator Townsend insisted the committee had not asked any senator thus far whether President Wilson had tried to influence him.

"I move," interrupted Senator Walsh, "that in view of the serious statements made touching the executive that any senator who has already testified may be recalled and interrogated in reference thereto."

"I am for that," said Senator Nelson, and members of the committee agreed.

Intensified Feeling.

Dragging President Wilson's tariff activities into the investigation somewhat intensified feeling within the committee and it is expected that it will make more searching the investigations still to be carried on.

Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, also a Republican, following Senator Townsend on the stand, expressed the opinion that the executives had had more influence in bills than all the persons who have come to Washington, put together.

"The statement that the president put out in regard to an insidious lobby influenced the public mind," Senator Weeks said. "And that has its effect upon the senators. The public believes a lobbyist is a bad man and no senator likes to oppose a measure if the president says the lobbyists are seeking to change it."

Did Not Ask Senator Shively.

The committee members did not ask Senator Shively, who followed Senator Weeks, whether the president had influenced his position on the tariff. Senator Shively, a Democratic member of the finance committee, said he knew of no lobbying influences at work on the tariff bill.

The senate agreed early in the afternoon to extend the time limit for lobby investigation twenty days or until June 28. Members of the committee doubt whether it can be completed within that tim. The new element injected into it today probably will carry the questioning of senators over into next week. Features of the so-called lobbies on sugar, wool. metals, liquor, labor and other legislation must then be taken up as the second stage of the investigation.

Not in the Form of Charges.

Senator Townsend's statements in relation to President Wilson were not in the form of charges. He expressly said he did not charge the president with using improper methods; but he insisted that the charges that lobbies existed and the activity of the president in support of free wool and free sugar amounted to an "undue influence" even though he did not use the "big stick" of patronage.

"As the term 'lobbyist' is generally understood," he said, "and as I believe it was used by the president in his recent statement, upon which this investigation was founded, it means one who tries to secure or prevent legislation by the use of means that are improper; by the offer or payment of money, the granting or withholding of favors, by insidious threats of political opposition, by the use of patronage or the giving of political rewards. I know of no improper lobbyist of that kind. The nearest approach to undue influence exerted upon members of congress, I believe, is the influence exercised by the president and by the use and power of the party secret caucus."

"Do you mean to say that is lobbying?" demanded Senator Reed.

"A lobbyist is a man who attempts to influence legislation

REACH SETTLEMENT IN SPAULDING CASE

CHAS. W. SPAULDING WILL RECEIVE $10,000 AND LAND FROM STATE

Former Treasurer of Illinois University Asked Refund of Notes and Other Securities and a Monetary Refund of $290,000.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., JUNE 6.—A settlement in the case of Charles W. Spaulding, former treasurer of the University of Illinois was effected to day when the representatives of the state agreed to give him $10,000 cash and deeds to a tract of Idaho land. At a conference in the house appropriations room participated in by Attorney General Lucey, Attorney Tilson of Chicago, representing Spaulding, and members of the appropriations committee, the terms of the settlement were agreed upon.

Spaulding was convicted of embezzling funds of the State University and was sent to the penitentiary. The state then instituted suit against him and secured a judgment for $231,000 and Spaulding turned over to the state notes, stocks, bonds, a tract of land in Idaho and several tracts of land in this state.

The governor, state treasurer, state auditor and attorney general were named a commission to handle the estate. Most of the land had been sold when Spaulding gained his release from the penitentiary and he instituted suits against state officials who had served on the commission, declaring they had mismanaged the estate. The claim was made by Spaulding's attorneys that if the estate had been properly managed it would have been worth approximately $290,000 over the $231,000 judgment against him. He asked a refund of notes and other securities turned over to the state and a monetary refund of $290,000.

The present "omnibus" appropriation bill carries $20,000 for taking care of the state's interests in the Idaho land and for the defense of state officers made defendants in Spaulding's suits.

These items will now be stricken from the bill.

Utility Bill Not Advanced.

The administration utility bill, reported by the house utility committee was read a second time in the house to day but was not advanced to third reading.

After the bill had been under discussion for an hour further consideration was made a special order for next Tuesday morning immediately after the reading of the journal.

The house elections committee made its report to day to the house on the Boardman-Hennebry contest and its consideration together with that of a minority report made by Representative Dillon was made a special order for next Tuesday.

The majority report of the committee seats Boardman, Progressive over Hennebry, Democrat now holding the seat from the forty first district by virtue of the certificate of election given him by the state canvassing board. Boardman's plurality under the recount of the ballots in Will and DuPage counties is 150 votes.

Report "Greatly Exaggerated"

Great excitement was occasioned in Springfield to day by a rumor coming from Chicago that Governor Dunee was dead. Newspaper correspondents hastened to the mansion when they could not get it by telephone. The governor was found sitting beneath a big shade tree in a far corner of the mansion grounds, resting during the noon hour after a rush of business at his office. He laughted heartily at the report and suggested to correspondents that:

"The report is greatly exaggerated."

Bills Passed In House.

With more than 100 members present the house got down to the passage of bills to day immediately following the reading of the Journal. When the late session adjourned last night a number of members announced their intention of leaving for home. In consequence it was presumed that there would not be a quorum of 77 members present to day.

Bill were passed by the house as follows:

H. B. 704. A complete revision of the coal mining laws. Ayes 102; nays, 0.

S. B. 188. Re-enacting the Chicago Police pension bill passed originally two years ago under defects similar to those for which the Supreme Court declared other laws inconstitutional. The new bill makes but one change in the former law. In case of the death of a policeman's widow, children under 16 years of age shall receive the same pension which the widow was entitled. Ayes 100; nays, 0.

H. B. 820 (Wets). Permits the joining of drainage districts for the construction and operation of a joint pumping station. Ayes 107; nays, 0.

H. B. 161. Providing that courts having 10 judges shall be divided into chancery and law divisions, three to sit in chancery, the other seven to sit in law. The measure is said to relieve a chaotic condition in the superior and circuit courts of Cook county. Ayes 102; nays, 0.

On a roll call the house concurred in the Senate amendments to Representative Hull's bill (H. B. 102) providing for the in-corporation, management and regulation of wage loan corporations allowing loans to be made on wage assignments. Ayes 86; Nays, 50. As originally passed by the house the bill applied only to Cook county. The senate amended it to apply to the whole state and the house concurred.

H. B. 148 (Sullivan). Creating a city board of examiners to license masons and brick layers in cities over 150,000 inhabitants. Ayes, 79; nays, 2.

Bills Advanced in House.

Senator Compton's bill (S. B. 433) exempting pensions of war veterans from attachment and sale of execution was read a first time in the house and advanced to second reading without reference,

THREE ARE KILLED BY BOLT OF LIGHTNING

BOLT STRIKES CHURCH KILLING THREE AND INJURING ONE

Lightning Struck Steeple, Descended to Where the Four Men Were Sitting and Felled All Four—Fire Broke Out Immediately and Destroyed the Church.

FREEPORT, ILL., JUNE 6.—Lightning struck the German Reformed church near here today, killing three members of the congregation instantly, badly injuring a fourth and causing a fire which destroyed the church.

The dead:
W. J. Duitsman.
K. S. Meyer.
Wessel Hoke.

The bolt struck and apparently passed through the body of Ontje Oltman, paralyzing him and making him unconscious. Oltman regained consciousness, however, and it is believed will recover. All the victims were farmers.

A score of members of the church had gathered for the annual clean-up day and had just finished their work in the church and church yard. The four men were resting on benches directly beneath the steeple.

Lightning struck the steeple, descended to where they were sitting and felled all four. When other members of the congregation reached them three of the men were dead.

The lightning after passing through their bodies tore a great hole in the floor of the church and passed into the earth.

Fire broke out immediately in the steeple and destroyed the building within a few minutes. All of the victims were reported well-to-do.

Cyclone Unroofs Depot.

A cyclone struck the village of Bolton, three miles south of Baileyville, unroofed the Great Western railway depot and wrecked many siloes and small farm buildings. It caused no fatalities.

BLOWS HEAD OFF WITH SHOT GUN.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 6.—C. M. Isham, aged 65, a wealthy real-estate dealer committed suicide to day by literally blowing the top of his head off with a shot gun. His body was found in the basement of an unoccupied house. A notched stick was used to discharge the gun Isham receiving the charge squarely in the upper part of his forehead. Ill health and despondency are assigned as the cause for the act.

HALF OF DAIRIES ARE UNSANITARY.

Springfield, Ill., June 5.—A report made to day to the state board of health by chief Inspector Dr. E. C. Crawford, declares that out of 1,834 dairies in the Chicago district inspected from December 3, 1912 to June 1, 1913, 716 or nearly one half of them were found in an insanitary condition. The report adds that most of the violations were due to ignorance rather than through a willful desire to evade the state law.

SENATORS DISCUSS PAPER SCHEDULE

Consider Amendment to Put Duty Against Canadian Print Paper

FOR RETALIATORY DUTY

Majority of Sub-Committee Favors Retaliatory Duty on Two and One Half Cent Print Paper

NORRIS BEFORE COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, JUNE 6.—For several hours today the senate finance sub-committee of which Senator Johnson of Maine is chairman, discussed the paper schedule of the Underwood tariff bill and it is reported tonight that an amendment to put a retaliatory duty against Canada on print paper valued at not more than two and one-half cents per pound is being seriously considered. Because the majority of the sub-committee was inclined to this view, they summoned from New York John Norris, chairman of the paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers association who today reiterated opposition to the imposition of any countervailing duty.

No Decision Reached.

No decision was reached but it was learned from an authoritative source that the matter hangs in the balance with the leaning toward putting in the contervailing duty. In the Underwood bill retaliatory duties are imposed on higher grade papers valued at more than two and one-half cents a pound. The import tax is fixed at 12 per cent ad valorem and the countervailing duty is directed against Canada because of restrictions on pulps wood and pulp.

The proposal of the American paper manufacturers is that the added tax be extended to print paper.

Print paper in the Underwood bill is on the free list and the amendment being considered would provide "that if any country, dependency, province or other sub-division of government shall impose any export duty, export license fee or other charge of any kind whatsoever, wether in the form of additional charge or license fee or otherwise, upon printing paper, wood pulp or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp, there shall be imposed upon printing paper when imported either directly or indirectly from such country, dependency, province or other sub-division of government, a duty equal to the amount of such export duty or other export charges imposed by such country, etc., upon printing paper, wood pulp or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp."

Manufacturer's Argument.

Manufacturers agrue that a retaliatory duty against Canada would force the country to yield on some restrictions against American manufactures on wood pulp exports. In his argument before the sub-committee today Mr. Norris in addition to reiterating his argument against any countervailing duty called attention to a proposal of American paper manufacturers to establish a system of operating their mills only five days a week instead of six.

This, he argued, was another effort to curtail the American output of print paper.

"The consumption of paper has been growing steadily," Mr. Norris said in his brief, "at the rate of 90,000 tons per annum or 300 tons per day, but in the year 1911, not a single paper machine was built by the manufacturers in the United States.

"In the month of March, 1911, at the time they were appealing to your committee for relief their reports to the bureau of corporations showed that they were restricting their output below normal capacity to the extent of 156,000 tons per annum or 13 per cent. They were aggravating that restriction by the exportation of 45,795 tons of the news print paper in the fiscal year of 1911. Any unusual condition arising during the year, such as a strike, a fire, drought, or blizzard, or shortage of cars, or congestion of traffic would have precipitated a situation similar to that in the fall of 1907 and the spring of 1908 when a paper panic cost publishers approximately $10,000,000.

Deter New Investments.

"The paper makers inaugurated a campaign to deter investments in new mills and when they failed to stop construction in any other way they attacked the credit of the projectors of these new mills and urged banks to refuse loans to the new enterprises."

Mr. Norris contended that every measure the United States had directed against the Canadian provinces had reacted against the American paper maker and consumer that "instead of composing the situation they provoked an ugly complication which will require years of intelligent and delicate handling to adjust.

"Nothing can be done," he argued, "by compulsion or tariff threats to provide wood for the American paper industry. That day has passed. Canada controls the pulp wood supply. Its authority insist that they be dealt with upon a reasonable basis."

Not Part of Tariff Bill.

Senator Hitchcock proposed amendment to the tariff bill, which would put an increased graduated tax on tobacco and its manufacturers in accordance with a plan submitted by Attorney General McReynolds it was reported today may not be accepted by the finance committee. The feeling expressed is that such legislation should not be made a part of the tariff bill and that it should be given prolonged consideration. It also was said among the senators that the plan had not yet had the approval of the administration.

Goes Over to Next Session.

Senator Kenyon's resolution instructing the interstate commerce commission to investigate the receivership of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad and its acquisition of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois was brought up again today but on objection went over until the next senate session.

GOVERNOR BRANDS PAMPHLET AS FALSE

PAMPHLET IS SENT OUT FROM STATE UNIVERSITY

Represents That Governor Dunne and Appropriation Committee Are Attempting to Cripple the University.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., JUNE 6.—In a public statement given out tonight, Governor Dunne declares that a pamphlet sent out from the state University of Illinois, representing that he and the appropriation committee of the house and senate are attempting to cripple the university, create an entirely false and erroneous impression.

The governor reviews the present system of paying money to the university authorities and points out what he considers important defects. He said money appropriated for the university was drawn in lump sums and placed in the institution's treasury and paid out there. The governor, he says, was placed in the attitude of prefunctorily approving hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of vouchers long after the money had been spent.

Expert accountants, the government said, have advised him that this method of doing business insofar as it compels the executive to pass upon paid vouchers perfunctorily is ridiculous and absurd.

"The governor, therefore, upon conference with the state auditor and the chairman of the appropriation committees, has asked that this absurd and unsatisfactory system be changed.

The statement continues:

"The governor is insisting that moneys drawn by the university shall be upon itemized vouchers approved by the board of trustees of the university, then presented to the auditor of public accounts, whose duty it is to audit all vouchers in the same manner as is followed by other public institutions of the state and then paid to the state treasurer."

He declares that he is in favor of absolutely divorcing the university from politics.

GRAND JURY RETURNS TWENTY TWO INDICTMENTS

Indictments Are Result of the Murder of Howard Jones and Attempt to Lynch Italian Under Arrest.

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 6.—The special grand jury called to investigate the murder on May 28 of Howard Jones, the young railroad man, and the attempt the following night to lynch Francesco Guidice, the Italian under arrest charged with the killing, today returned twenty-two indictments, seventeen against rioters, one against Guidice, as principal, and four against accessories after the fact of the murder.

Only eight of the indictments have been made public. Those include Frank Forragine and Josephine, his wife, boarding house keepers where Guidice lived, and William Boerche, a fellow boarder, and Hardie Newman and Jack Bowen, as leaders of the mob. The charge of inciting to murder is made against Newman and Bowen, while the other alleged members of the mob are only charged with rioting.

Guidice was brought here today from Atlantic, where he was taken for safe keeping when the mob became threatening. The authorities do not fear another display of mob spirit.

SECOND GRAND JURY SWORN IN.

Chicago, June 6.—with the swearing in of a second grand jury to day by Judge Cooper to investigate alleged election frauds, rival forces in the controversy over the state's attorney office rested.

Another skirmish is expected next Monday when the two special grand juries are scheduled to convene.

The jury empanelled by Judge Kersten had adjourned until the jurist's amends his order correcting errors in the record and also pending a decision of Judge Baldwin in the quo warranto proceedings instituted against John E. Northrup, special state's attorney for Judge Cooper's grand jury. The latter body adjourned until Monday afternoon after it had been organized.

SENATE AGAIN FAILS TO RATIFY RENEWALS

RECENTLY EXPIRED ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS REMAIN UNRENEWED

Unless There is Change in Sentiment in the Senate the Renewal of Twenty-Three of the Treaties Which Gave Evidence of This Country's Belief in Principal of Compulsory Arbitration May Be Impossible.

WASHINGTON, JUNE 6.—The principle of compulsory arbitration into the code that has bound the United States with twenty-four great and lesser nations of the world for the last five years is in serious danger and unless there is a decided change in sentiment in the senate the renewal of twenty-three of the treaties which gave concrete evidence of this nation's belief in such a policy may be impossible. In executive session tonight the senate again failed to ratify renewals of the arbitration agreements with Great Britain, Italy and Spain which recently expired. These conventions provide that questions relating to the interpretation of treaties excepting those that cannot be settled through diplomatic channels or those of vital interest to national honor or independence shall be submitted to The Hague.

Treaty With France Renewed.

A similar treaty with France already has been renewed. The main argument tonight arose over the contention that if the treaty with Great Britain is ratified, the Panama canal tolls question would have to be submitted to The Hague but during the discussion the Japanese question and the general attitude of the nation toward compulsory arbitration was brought up and led to the expression of views utterly at variance with entrance into such binding agreements in the future. A motion to re-refer the three treaties to the foreign relations committee with instructions that the one with Great Britain be modified so as to exempt the Panama tolls question was abandoned but prolonged debate was predicted for future sessions and friends of the principle of arbitration were alarmed at the strength displayed by the opposition.

Senators who did not speak but who discussed arbitration with their colleagues during the debate, expressed decided opinions on the extent to which this nation has bound itself to argue matters out before a court. This attitude was condemned as one which is becoming misunderstood throughout the world and one which had appeared to the country's disadvantage in the Mexican problem, in the dispute with Great Britain and in the more recent controversy with Japan. Many senators were convinced tonight that few of the twenty-three agreements which come up for renewal in the next few months will be agreed to without a hard fight. Although the treaties probably have many supporters Chairman Bacon of the foreign relations committee was about the only one who spoke in their behalf.

Opposed to British Treaty.

Ten senators have openly declared their opposition to the British treaty. Senator S. O'Gorman, Crawford, Pomerene and Bristow spoke against this treaty. Senator Bacon favored the ratification of the pacts and pointed out tht aside from the tolls question now so troublesome the United States might find itself in controversy with Great Britain in the next five years which it would be glad to submit to The Hague.

Senator Lewis counselled moderation and a considerate spirit upon the part of the senate. He thought the vexing conditions could be smothered out and that ratification was possible. Senator Borah took the stand that if the United States was wrong in its attitude in the tolls matter it should take the "manly" stand and openly admit its mistake.

Senator Newlands was against compulsory arbitration but favored the "pursuasive" sort.

Defends California's Action.

Senator Works made the speech bringing in the Japanese question. He defended California's action and opposed treaties which would bind the states in matters of this sort. It was pointed out at the conclusion of the session that if the arbitration agreements are not ratified the United States would then be bound only by the second Hague treaty under which disputes relating to the interpretation of treaties or arising in other ways are not compulsory but can be settled in this fashion if the nations concerned are agreed. So far as both the tolls and Japanese disputes are concerned the United States could then submit them to The Hague or not as it sees fit.

The Bryan plan in the opinion of many senators would not prove binding at all in case of serious difficulty and might therefore not be subjected to the sharp criticism brought out today if it is laid before the senate.

STOP GOVERNMENT SUIT.

Chicago, June 6.—Suit of the government against the Illinois Retail Lumber Dealers' association started four years ago in connection with the government general proceedings against the so called "lumber trust" was non-suited here to day. District Attorney Wilkerson declared the non suit was at the direction of the department of justice.

SEEK LIGHT ON WAGES PAID MARRIED MEN

Attempt to Find Relation of Men's Wages to Immorality to Women

FORCE GIRLS TO WORK

Where Head of Family's Wages is Small Daughter is Forced to Seek Employment Away

ELLA FLAGG YOUNG ON STAND

CHICAGO, JUNE 6.—Three and sometimes four members of the Illinois senatorial vice-commission sweltered through two sessions here to day seeking light on minimum wages paid married men and the relation of this wage to immorality among women.

Julius Rosenwald, head of a big mail order house caused a stir when he told the commission that he had lost faith in its motives. Other witnesses were J. J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank; George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National bank, David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank. James B. Forgan, president of the First National bank. Edward Hillman, E. J. Lehmann, James Simpson, Edward Hillman and Joseph Basch, merchants; Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of Chicago Schools and Theodore W. Robinson, vice-president of the Illinois Steel company.

Forced to Seek Work.

Today's inquiry was directed to show that where the head of a family earns a small wage his daughter or daughters are forced to seek employment where they are more open to evil advances than when at home.

The bankers for the most part said they do not employ married men earning less than $1,000 a year. James B. Forgan stated that an ordinary bank clerks receive $91 a month in his bank; book-keepers $128 and assistants $72 a month. None was prepared to state just what a family could be supported on.

"When I was learning the banking business in Scotland," James B. Forgan said, "I got in a year what young fellows now-a-days get in a month and thought I was lucky."

$12 Men Cheapest Hired.

Among the merchants the practice is not to hire married men who are not cable of earning at least $12 a week. Joseph Basch and others declared that thrifty families save money on such a wage.

"I have known $12 men who went from their work to cheerful homes owned by themselves and who had money in the bank," said Mr. Basch.

"On the other hand I have known men earning twice that who went to rented homes and who were broke. It depends on the family and largely on the house wife."

Mr. Basch admitted that the practice of paying married men a minimum of $12 began in his store twelve years ago. Speaking as an expert he estimated that in that period the cost of living has advanced 60 per cent, mostly on food stuffs.

Mr. Robinson, who said the Illinois Steel company employes 22,000 men at an average wage of $2.74, developed into an impromptu lobbyist for the Cooley Vocational School bill, now pending in the state senate, which he said would do more for the rising generation than any one other measure he could think of.

Pay Men as Much as Possible.

"We do not try to pay men as little as we can; we try to pay as much as we can," said Mr. Robinson. "Recently we raised the minimum paid common laborers from $1.75 to $1.95."

Taking up the attitude of the commission that girls are "forced" by the low wages of their fathers totake up employment, Mr. Robinson stated that rich and poor alike are forced to seek employment, or become drones. He admitted that while the rich girl may find her employment in music or some other branch of art, the poor girl would be forced to work in stores, offices or shops.

The room was suffocating with heat when Ella Flagg Young was called but these members of the commission who occasionally had left the room for a breath or air were all in their seats.

Noted Educator Testifies.

Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara, chairman knew Mrs. Young when he was a school boy and apparently had lost none of his awe of her. He first presented every member to her and then, for five minutes at least, every member sat perfect silent while the noted educator spoke. Finally they became sufficiently at ease to ask questions, mainly about vocational training. Mrs. Young seemed to prefer men teachers to women as she said the former were more ambitious while she said the school ma'am was content with the living and always in the background was the thought of marriage and a home.

To day's session was designated as a "get-together" session and the witnesses were not sworn. Additional witnesses will be heard tomorrow.

against the honest conviction, the conscience and the notions of duty of the legislator," returned Senator Townsend. "Because of the insinuation that a lobby exists to influence them to vote for amendments they believe in, I think some senators will refrain from so voting. I believe this is certain."

Does Not Blame Executive.

"You believe there is a species of lobbying from the executive as well as from the outside?" asked Senator Cummins.

"Yes, sir, I have no doubt of it," replied Senator Townsend.

"I do not blame the executive any more than any other. It seems to be rather popular nowadays.

"There are two sides to this question. The fact that a man is for protection is not an evidence that he is not honest.

"Democratic leaders have been reported as saying: 'This is to be a matter the president must decide and in order to be a good Democrat and receive the paramount of patronage and perhaps be opposed, you must support the party measures.'"

"Do you know any human being that can say that as a matter of fact that President Wilson has either withheld or given appointments to affect the vote of any man in congress?" demanded Senator Reed.

"No., I do not; I know only what I have heard rumored and seen in papers," said Senator Townsend.

Senator Townsend said he had no substantial interests that might be affected by the tariff and knew of no lobbies existing in Washington.

Senator Cummins told the committee that the flooding of senators with telegrams and letters was the only practice he had observed in Washington that was wrong and cost money.

" Big Eyes, Big Brain.

Professor Laugier, a French scientist, has discovered that the size of the brain in animals is in exact proportion to the size of the eyes. The bigger the eyes the bigger the brains' Of course this only applies to each class of animal. A tiger may have bigger eyes than a man for instance, but it doesn't follow that it has a bigger brain. But the tiger with big eyes is more cunning and brainy than a tiger with small eyes. Professor Laugier made this remarkable discovery when studying the habits of the fish known as the dorade or gilthead. There are two kinds of dorade, one pink and the other gray. The gray fish has a much smaller eye than the pink one. The scientist cut open a large number of these fish in his experiments and was struck by the fact that the large eyed fish always had the largest brain. He promptly followed up this discovery by testing other animals. He found, for example, that the little tree frog had a much larger eye than the larger marsh frog and had also a larger brain. He asserts that the same rule applies among higher animals.

Joaquin Miller In London.

Joaquin Miller is especially felicitous in his description of mountains and sea. His phrasing is strong and, though sometimes strained, vivid and true:

Afar the bright Sierras lie
A swaying line of snowy white,
A fringe of heaven hung in sight
Against the blue base of the sky.

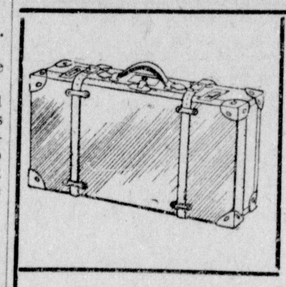

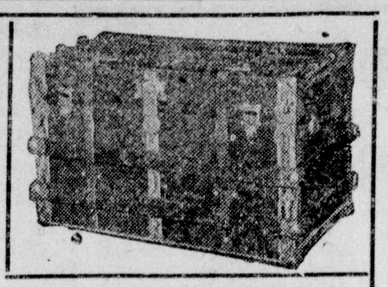

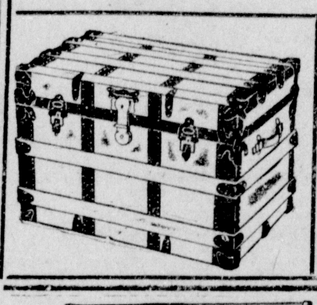

And this is aptly descriptive of the ocean foaming on the shore:

The ocean's thin and hoary hair
Is trailed along the silvered sands.

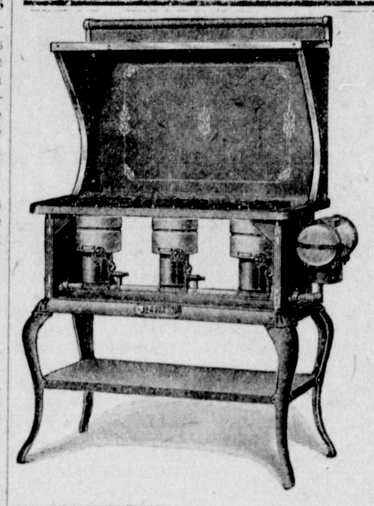

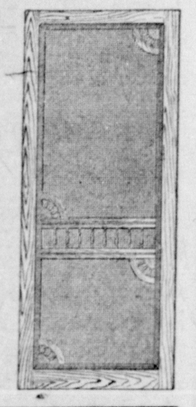

After the late Lord Houghton climbed the attic stairs to Joaquin's room and found him sleeping under a buffalo robe the crude young westerner became a familiar figure in London social circles. He did not abandon his frontier costume, but invaded London drawing rooms with trousers tucked into his boots and his tawny hair and beard flowing uncut over a scarlet shirt. He afterward settled in Washington as a journalist and in 1887 removed to California.—Westminster Gazette.

Mother's Friend in Every Home

Comfort and Safety Assured Before the Arrival of the Stork.

The old saying—what is home without a mother—should add "Mother's Friend."

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibres and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 128 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their free book. Write to-day. It is most instructive.

There is a wealth of instruction and comfort to be derived in reading this little book. It is plainly written, just what every woman wants to know, and will be a splendid little textbook for guidance, not only for yourself, but will make you helpful to others. And, in the meantime, do not fail to get a bottle of Mother's Friend at the drug store, and thus fortify yourself against any and all pain and discomfort.

HEAD COVERED WITH WHITE PIMPLES

Went to Ear, Shoulders and Whole Body. Thick and Sticky on Head. Eruption Covered With Blood. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Ransom, Ill.—"The trouble started on our baby when he was only about two weeks old. Started like little white pimples, looked like an old scab of blood and matter. His whole head was covered for a few months then it went to his ear, shoulders, and his whole body. It seemed to come out thick and sticky on his head, while on the other parts of his body it was more like water coming out of the skin. He would scratch until the eruption would be all covered with blood and gradually spread. The least little stir or rub would cause the sores to bleed, spread and itch. Never had a full night's sleep, restless all night.

"The sores were horrid to look at. It lasted until he was about two and a half years old. Then we saw an eczema advertisement in the paper to use ———, but it did no good. Then we used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. We put the Cuticura Ointment on thick at bed time and put a tight hood on so he could not scratch the sores. Then we washed it clean with Cuticura Soap and warm water twice a day, and he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. F. Sulzberger, Dec. 30, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

BURLESON GIVES POSTAL FIGURES

POSTMASTER GENERAL MAKES STATEMENT AT TO POLICY.

Administrative Force Has Been Largely Increased—Two Hundred and Three New Rural Routes Established—Calls Made That Discontinuance of Back Stamping Will Facilitate Movement of Mail.

Washington, June 6.—Postmaster General Burleson today gave out a statement summarizing various measures adopted or contemplated in the administration of the postal service. The statement says in part:

"During the ninety days of the new administration about 1,000 additional clerks and approximately 500 additional city letter carriers have been attached to the various post offices throughout the country, and besides these additions to the regular force approximately $1,000,000 has been authorized for temporary hire, and about $500,000 for temporary city letter carriers. These unusual financial demands made it necessary for the postmaster general to go to congress in May for an emergency appropriation of $600,000, which was promptly granted, and $300,000 allotted for temporary clerk hire and a like amount for temporary carriers.

Offices Filled.

"On March 5, 1913, there were about 2,200 vacant postmasterships of the presidential grade, and some 300 have become vacant since. Of these more than 1,800 cases have been briefed and about 1,500 nominated to the senate.

Of the fourth-class postmasterships which were found vacant on March 5, including those which have become vacant since, amounting to about 4,500, more than 1,700 have been filled as the result of civil service examinations or inspector's reports, leaving at the present time about 1,000 of the presidential grade and some 2,800 of the fourth class to be disposed of. These are being dealt with expeditiously.

"Within the last sixty days 488 petitions for rural delivery routes have been disposed of, resulting in the establishment of 203 routes, involving an annual expenditure for maintenance of approximately $190,000. By the establishment of these new routes and the extension of old routes more than 200,000 people are now receiving their mail at their doors, instead of at remote post offices.

Backstamping Discontinued.

"In pursuance of the policy of expediting the delivery of mail, the postmaster general has ordered the discontinuance of the backstamping of all ordinary mail which heretofore has delayed its delivery anywhere from twenty minutes to one-half hour.

"The condition in the railway mail service was found to be most urgent where through mistaken ideas of economy the clerical force had been so reduced as to effect efficient service and car space cut down to a danger point. With the advent of the parcel post system on January 1, which increased tremendously the volume of business handled additional clerks and increased car space were most imperative. But nothing was done to relieve this, it being left to the new administration to restore the efficiency of this important branch of the service. Nine hundred and ten additional clerks have been added to the service since March 4, and increased car space costing $267,000 a year has been provided. Already a marked improvement is noted in this service.

Parcels Post Rules Modified.

"The parcel post regulations have been modified so as to permit the delivery to the addressee without additional charge, of matter reaching the office of address with improper stamps affixed.

"By an arrangement made with the Canadian postal service the rates of postage on Sunday editions of daily newspapers mailed to subscribers in Canada, who also are subscribers to the week-day editions has been fixed at one cent a pound or fraction thereof instead of at one cent for four ounces or fraction, as formerly."

In conclusion the statement says:

"It is Postmaster General Burleson's desire and earnest endeavor to establish, in the interest of economy and efficiency, uniform methods and practices throughout the entire service and to direct postmasters to the best way of administering the postal facilities. To this end he proposes to keep in close touch with their operations, and thus bring the service to the highest possible degree of efficiency."

SECRETARY BRYAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO DIPLOMATS

INTRODUCES GEO. W. GUTHRIE, NEW U. S. AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN.

Secretary of State Pays Tribute to Both New American Ambassador and to Ambassador and to Ambassador Chinda of Japan—Baran Chinda Praises President Wilson.

Pittsburgh, June 6.—Secretary Bryan, invited to introduce George W. Guthrie, the new American ambassador to Japan and Baron Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, at the dinner here tonight in honor of Mr. Guthrie, paid glowing tributes to both of the diplomats. He said in part.

"I am here for a double purpose, First to introduce two distinguished gentlemen, His Excellency Viscount Chinda who with such ability and distinction, represents Japan at the capital of our nation and Ambassador Guthrie, to whom has been given the honor of representing the United States at Tokio. My connection with the department having to do with foreign relations makes it appropriate that I should be present on this occasion, when the representatives of the respective countries make each others acquaintance. The second purpose of my visit is to pay my respects to and express my personal regard for the gentlemen who are entrusted with the honorable responsible mission of representing the two countries so close and intimately united by the bonds of friendship. I have had opportunity of renew in this country an acquaintance with His Excellency, the Japanese ambassador, which began nearly eight years ago in his far away home. I feel that both his country and ours are fortunate in having in the diplomatic service one so fully equipped for the duties that fall to an ambassador. While no one could surpass him in devotion to the interests to his countrymen, it would be equally impossible to surpass him in the courtesy and kindness of spirit which are as valuable in international affairs. He has set so high a standard that the president has been careful to select as our representative to Japan a man of the highest character, of large experience and sincerely appreciative of the greatness and the progress of the country to which he goes.

"I am sure that Mr. Guthrie will meet the most exacting requirements of his great office and that the delightful occasion in which we participate tonight may be regarded as fitly representing the amitable international relations which it will be the pleasure of these two gentlemen to maintain and strengthen."

Baron Chinda's Address.

Pittsburg, June 6.—The address of Baron Chinda, Japanese ambassador, at the dinner here tonight to the new American ambassador to Japan, George W. Guthrie, was followed with great interest owing to the prominence he has taken in recent international affairs. Viscount Chida said:

"Allow me to express my profound appreciation of the privilege kindly extended to me to assist at this brilliant function held in honor of his excellency, Mr. Guthrie, your new ambassador to the court of Tokio. With your permission I will gadly make use of the opportunity thus afforded me to say that both the United States and Japan are to be sincerely congratulated upon the appointment by which the important mission of representing this great republic in Japan has been placed in so able and distinguished a hand.

"Once more has your illustrious and respected president shown his high qualities of statesmanship, in the choice of the right man in the right place. It is therefore with an unmixed feeling of delight that I join in this public demonstration of good will tendered to your honored ambassador. Especially great is my pride to think that I am the first of all my countrymen to extend to him the hearty and cordial greetings which are no doubt in abundant store for him in Japan.

"Gentlemen, the constant improvement in the means of communication and transportation is substantially reducing the geographical distance which intervenes between different parts of the world. The United States and Japan, separated as they are by the vast and unfathomed waters of the Pacific ocean, are now brought, and are destined to be brought, into closer contact with each other in all branches of peaceful activities.

American People Fair.

"I do not deny that such contact is liable to give rise to occasional misunderstandings and complications, but I do deny the existence, or the possible existence, of those difficulties which would not eventually yield to due and timely processes of diplomatic treatment, the treatment of justice and fair play and of a sympathetic understanding of the problems of each nation by the other. It is this spirit that has so eminently characterized the American people, and has also invariably guided the course of action taken by Japan in dealing with questions of international moment. It is in this spirit alone that those questions could be successfully adjusted to the true and lasting satisfaction of all parties. It should be the noble endeavor of every patriotic man in both countries, to direct his attention to an amicable solution on such basis, of any problem that may confront us in our intercourse, and to transmit to our posterity the unspotted record of our mutual good understanding bequeathed to us by our forefathers. That record forms part of our dear and valued assets. It should be preserved. It should be amplified, and extended to all ages to come.

Will Remain Neighbors.

"Our two nations, bound by such auspicious tradition, and guided by the same aims and the same aspirations to contribute to the pacific progress of the world, should forever remain good and trusted neighbors. And I feel, gentlemen that my humble labors in this direction find ready co-operation and encouragement at the hands of your great president, as well as of your renowned secretary of state, Mr. Bryan, and your worthy representative to Japan, Mr. Guthrie, who honor us by their presence tonight.

"I am sure that the expressions of friendship voiced by such distinguished leaders of American politics cannot fail to touch a responsive cord in the hearts of all thinking men on both sides of the Pacific."

TRADE REVIEW PRESENTS VARYING FACTORS

BETTER WEATHER IMPROVES RETAIL TRADE.

Financial Pessimism and Apprehension of Tariff Changes in Sharp Contrast to Favorable Returns as To Actual Current Trade.

New York, June 6.—Bradstreets state of trade tomorrow will say:

Varying factors are presented by this week's reports, financial pessimism over tariff changes, being in sharp contrast to very favorable returns as to actual current trade and as to crops. Better weather has improved distribution at retail, jobbers throughout a wide area of the country have enjoyed a good volume of business for prominent delivery and crop news is almost uniformly favorable.

But the financial situation, involving as it does stock market liquidation, tight money and more than usual difficulty in making collections together with a certain degree of uncertainty regarding tariff matters, continues to hold up operations for the far future. Withal, the trends of the week have been rather more encouraging than otherwise and even in the east, where textiles have been working under a pull buying has expanded on a moderate scale and in the principal western center clearance sales of dry goods by jobbers have been of record proportions—that is, for a clean-up.

Business failures for the week ending June 5th were 215 which compares with 197 in the like week of 1912.

Dun's Trade Review.

Dun's Weekly Review of Trade tomorrow will say:

More seasonable weather has had a favorable effect on retail distribution throughout the country and while a slight recession in wholesale business is apparent in some sections of the western, reports from several centers show trade to be more active than a year ago. Prices on the New York stock exchange fell sharply but this weakness was mainly due to the unloading of American securities by European holders as a result of the strained condition of the investment markets there and in no way reflected any change in the mercantile or industrial situation in this country.

The government estimate of the condition of the cotton crop on May 25th, was much lower than expected but it is generally believed that the situation has improved materially since then.

Needed rains have greatly benefitted the crops in the southwest.

New business in iron and steel falls short of production but the mills have plenty of orders on hand and it is expected that active buying will be resumed before they become exhausted.

St. Clair, Pa. — "My mother was alarmed because my periods were suppressed and I had pains in my back and side, and severe headaches. I had pimples on my face, my complexion was sallow, my sleep was disturbed, I had nervous spells, was very tired and had no ambition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has worked a charm in my case and has regulated me. I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."—Miss ESTELLA MAGUIRE, 110 Thwing St., Saint Clair, Pa.

How She Cured Her Husband

"For five years my husband suffered with his stomach. The medicine he took only gave relief for a while, nothing cured, writes Mrs. Sarah Baker of Nottinghill, Mo. "Our merchant bought some of Chamberlain's medicines last fall and also received some free trial samples of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. He gave us some of them and I wanted my husband to try them. He said it would do no good. His stomach had been troubling him worse than ever. At last on Friday I told him if he would not take those tablets I was going to send for a doctor, and he said he would take them. By Monday he was like another man. The blues were gone, no more trouble with his stomach, and the best part is that the trouble has not returned. I cannot praise Chamberlain's Tablets too highly."

EXPERTS CONCEDE MISSOURI FIRST PLACE IN MEET

Coach Brewer's Men Thought to Have Sufficient Class to Pile Up 31 Points—Drake and Ames Withdraw.

Camp Randell Field, Madison, Wis., June 6—Experts generally tonight concede Missouri first place in the thirteenth annual conference meet. Coach Brewer's men, led by the great hurdler Nicholson were considered to have men of class sufficient to pile up 31 points. In addition to Nicholson Missouri's athletes expected to win points are Kirksey, Thatcher and Wickham.

The University of Chicago's star dash man, Parker, with the help of Mathews or Ward was expected to put the Maroons in the running early in the game. In Applegate of Purdue the midway sprinters expect to find a dangerous rival and Cortis of Illinois and Kirksey of Missouri were not to be counted out.

Illinois which is conceded the relay race, will try to break the conference record of 3:23 1-5 established in 1910 by Leland Stanford. The Illini drew the pole in the relay drawing tonight and will have as competitors in the events, Chicago, Missouri, Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Ohio and Perdue. Showing of the Notre Dame quarter milers today was disappointing and their supporters do not expect them to do very well in the relay. The drawings tonight placed Applegate of Perdue, and Parker of Chicago in different heats which is taken to mean that they will meet in the final.

Announcement was made that Drake and Ames had withdrawn from the meet.

ILLINOIS WINS OVER TIME GAME

TAKES ELEVEN INNING CONTEST FROM NORMAL U.

Charleston Nine Arrived in City Unexpectedly, Failing to Receive Message Not to Come—Pitching of Wheeler and Hill Features.

Illinois college turned the trick on the nine from Eastern Illinois Normal university of Charleston Friday afternoon on Illinois field, in an overtime game of eleven innings, by a score of 4 to 3. The features of the game were the pitching of both pitchers, Wheeler and Hill, Apple's catch in the bleechers and Wheeler's timely hitting. Thursday night a telegram was sent to the Charleston manager stating that the game could not be played on account of the heavy rain. The message was never delivered and Friday afternoon the Charleston team showed up, unexpectedly to the local college nine who got busy and soon had a team on the geld ready for the contest.

The game, although not witnessed by a big crowd, was interesting, both pitchers being in good form and were given splendid support. The game lasted for eleven innings when illinois pushed the winning run over with only one man out.

Illinois played a consistent game throughout, making only two errors, both of which were excusable. Hill who held the local players to two lonely hits at Charleston was touched up for 8 safeties, among them a triple and a double. After the first inning Wheeler setled down and pitched superb ball, striking out fourteen men and allowing only seven scattered hits, no two of which came in the same inning. Jaccard Apple and Wheeler were the bright stars at bat.

Eastern Illinois Normal found Wheeler a hard proposition in the box and had difficulty in connecting with his shoots. Percival and Bigler were the only ones who seemed able to solve his delivery, the former making a home run and the latter two singles.

How the Runs Were Made.

Flaherty the first man up for Normal drew a base on balls. Percival hit one square on the nose for a home run, scoring Flaherty ahead of him. In the same inning Illinois scored one on consecutive singles by Jaccard, Stewart and Apple. Neither side scored in the second. The first half of the third was featured by Apple's catch of what looked like a two base hit from Flaherty's bat. Apple went behind the railing in front of the bleechers and made the catch amide cheers of the crowd. It was a peach of a play. In the last half of the third Illinois scored one. Jaccard reached first on an error and by harding running went from first to third on Stewart's sacrifice bunt. e scored a moment later on Apple's second single.

Neither side scored in the fourth or fith. In the sixth Normal scored one when Percival reached first on an error by Gary, was sacrificed to second and scored on Corzine's double. After that the visitors were never able to score. They got a hit in each of the 8th, 9th and 10th innings, but the came when there was no danger.

Wheeler practically won his own game in the eighth when he tied the score. After two were out, he hit a line drive which rolled to the dormitory. As Wheeler went from second to third the ball was thrown wild to third to head him off. Wheeler kept going and scored when the third baseman threw wild trying to catch him at home. Illinois threatened to score in the tenth when Jaccard doubled after one was out, but the necessary hit to score him was not forthcoming. Wheeler clinched his own game in the eleventh by scoring the winning run. He lead off with a single went to second on an error by Flaherty. Widenham laid down a neat bunt, moving Wheeler to third. Gary also bunted, Wheeler scoring the winning run, when Percival dropped Hill's throw to the plate.

STRANGE CITY OF CANTON DESCRIBED

TAKE NIGHT TRIP ON RIVER FROM HONGKONG.

Jacksonville Tourists Take Trip About City in Sedan Chairs, Visiting Ancient Temples and Other Places of Interest.

(By S. W. Nichols).

Hongkong, China.

A Trip to Canton.

We have been a day in Canton and to try to describe it seems to me like telling a blindman how a fine painting appears. There is no accurate description possible, but I shall try to give the readers of the Journal something like an account of a few of the sights and sounds we encountered.

The city is located on the Pearl river and is within three or four hours by rail or a night ride on a boat, and we chose the latter and came near having a little difficulty at the start, for the tickets read that I should have the upper berth in stateroom number four and Mr. Ewert the lower and he insisted on disregarding the tickets and taking the lower anyway, so I had to submit, though I told him he might be routed out and made to pay over again.

When we awoke in the morning we were attracted by the scenery along the shore, which was strange and fully like the interior of the Flowery kingdom, but it was not scenery we were seeking this time, but the sights and sounds of this strange city. We had to have a professional guide and one was on the steamer ready to do our bidding and we followed him ashore in a neat little sampan, or house boat, whose owner makes a living transporting passengers about the great river. The little craft was perhaps thirty feet long and the rear two-thirds was devoted to the family use It was very neat and had the usual Chinese belongings, a little shrine and tiny place for the occupants to stow themselves away at night. All was so compact that I began to wonder why we need so much room in our commodious abodes, when these people seem happy in a space little larger than a pantry. The part devoted to passengers was partitioned off, but not so effectually as to prevent one from looking to the whole rear end of the boat. Seats for six were arranged and covered with rattan cushions and above were several pictures neatly framed. The young man who did most of the work managing the craft had recently been married and the photo of himself and wife was in a prominent place.

The waters of the river are deep yellow, as if mixed constantly with mud and the tide affects it more or less. It is deep enough to float large sized craft and we saw steamers from various ports and a few gunboats frowned on us as we sailed by. Hundreds of all kinds of river craft swarmed about the owners clamoring for business and there was hardly enough to go around, but the din was enough for a whole city.

We were soon ashore and were informed that we were in a city of four million inhabitants, though how accurate the census is I don't have any idea, but certainly there is a vast mass of humanity there. It is said, too, that half a million live in river craft and I could believe it. Stalwart men with chairs were on hand eager for a bargain and we were not long in making one. We were told sedan chairs were the only means of travel, as the streets will not admit of wheels at all.

A chair is ordinarily a rattan seat, shaped like a box, with a high back, a board footrest, small uprights at the corners to support a canopy in case or sun or rain, and a pole twelve feet long on each side. For short trips an ordinary person is carried by two coolies, who trot along with out great discomfort, but when we go on longer distances, as in our case, a third man takes his place between the poles near the chair, ties a piece of webbing to the poles, passes it about his shoulders and helps carry the load. They have wonderful endurance and trot along with comparative ease. Their shoulders must be callous, for they wear little or nothing on them, only a towel with which to wipe the perspiration from their faces and bodies. They had on some sort of blouses when we started, but they soon dispensed with them and wore only pants and those rolled up above their knees, while their bare feet seemed oblivious of all sorts of rough obstruction which we encountered.

And now we start away and for a while I feel guilty at being carried by a fellow man in such a beast of burden style, but the men seemed glad to get the engagement and I try to forget all else but the sights about me. For a while we pass along a canal front, where are some stores and places of business rather up to date, but we care little for these and are soon borne aside into a narrow street swarming with human beings, the thoroughfare not more than five or six feet wide. Our coolies keep up a perpetual shouting to the people in the street to get out of the way, the people respond in kind and there is a perfect babel of sounds as we move along. We are kings of the highway, for no animal attached to a vehicle could ever travel those streets, as every little while we encounter stairs which ascend several steps. In and out we wind, our street getting a trifle narrower as we go, while all along are endless rows of all kinds of business places, the whole front exposed, the family generally existing in the rear and all are bent on making all gains possible. Occasionally there is a sign in English, though why there sould be I could hardly tell, for there seemed to be no persons speaking that language anywhere except ourselves and a few other tourists.

I will say one thing for our coolies; they were polite at all times, but I did think the men who carried Henrietta were most proud of their burden, and as she was light and needed but two men, they looked rather triumphantly at the others of their company.

Curious Work.

Our guide was well up in his business and knew the places which attract us most. Our first stop was at a place where the feathers of birds are used for ornaments in a peculiar manner. The choicest bits of plumage are secured from the bird and then dextrously attached to all sorts of articles and glazed or coated over and made to look like the real article, only it is protected with something akin to porcelain. Bracelets, belt buckles, match boxes and toilet articles are thus adorned and looked beautiful and wholly unique.

Another place was an embroidery shop and the work done by these celestials is indeed a marvel. Delicate figures, intricate work, beautiful designs all combined in all sorts of articles, table cloths, table covers, piano covers, dress patterns and every conceivable thing in that line and I wondered how people ever found their way to that place in that tucked up narrow street to buy the lovely things exposed for sale. The Celestials thought they had some good customers in us, but we were not ready to buy such elegant articles and passed on, much to their regret.

Another place was where they were making paper from bamboo, and it was curious to note that when it was dry it was brittle and easily torn, but when it was wet it was quite tough.

Other Sights.

All along places for the sale of provisions were frequent, though we saw few regular markets, for that would be too modern and so we met the ever sober native presiding over a few eggs and fowls, another over some tubs of rice, stil another over some sort of compounds not easily described or understood, another with a bit of fire preparing a savory (?) compound which furiously assailed our nostrils, but seemed a delicacy to the many native men about Some intelligent looking young men at the front of a more pretentious looking structure caused us to suppose that it was some sort of a school or academy for higher education and that they were along toward matriculation, but a Babel of voices a little farther along gave a different impression. Looking into the room, which was easily accessible, we saw a native school, the pupils sitting at desks and each one with book in hand actually seemed to be trying to talk louder than his neighbor and the teacher walked about, seeming to be well plased with his pupils. It was inded a strange spectacle.

And now we come to a lot of shops where the men are industriously working at their trades, generally sitting down and taking things easily. Here is a man making the queer shoes they wear. They are simply wooden soles, raised a little with pieces worked underneath and held on the foot with a piece of leather extending back a short distance from the toe and the wearers goes kicking along and sometimes lose their footgear on the way, though a vast majority go barefoot. Some men are making a very good article of furniture and some are doing some exquisite carving, turning out articles which are to grace the homes of mandarins or wealthy merchants, for no one else could buy such things as these are.

An Ancient Temple.

Our coolies set us down in front of an imposing gateway and we are ushered into an old time temple or monastery four hundred years old. In it are five hundred full size figures of genii in wood and gilded with pure gold. No two figures are in the same position and some are in striking attitudes. Incense is burned before each one and the little sticks used for the purpose are a common article of sale. Among the figures was one of Marco Paulo, a man whom our guide said the Chinese hold in great reverence. One of the priests wanted us to invest in a lot of old coins, but we were not aware of their value and didn't comply with his wishes.

The temple itself was old and rusty and the priests didn't look as if they had much to do and did little in keeping things in the best repair. They had absolutely no sacerdotal tasks at all and one would hardly take them for holy men from their appearance. Each had to have six holes burned in his head far enough to make a plain indentation, which was easily visible and the guide said they had to have their hair cut close by a young woman. He said there were four hundred in the building, strictly unmarried and not permitted to go out.

The main altar was rather elegant, though ancient and somewhat out of repair. The presiding genius or diety was a female figure carved full life size in wood, profusely gilded and having ten hands. In the patio, or open court, is a huge marble pagoda cut from one piece of stone and an immense affair. Before it for worship were some great pewter vessels and a lot of large porcelain candlesticks and other means of paying homage to the objects of worship.

As we left the palace a fat tourist remarked with unction, "God spare us from these foreign devils."

A Medicine Temple.

Another temple was for the use of those afflicted with various ills to which flesh is heir. About it were some wonderful carvings of stone, among other things a stone lion with a loose marble in his mouth, and we could stick our fingers within, but could not get the marble out. There were ranged about a large room sixty porcelain images about twenty inches high and they were called watchman and numbered consecutively from one to sixty and were to be worshipped according to the age of the person who is sick. The one ten years going to number ten and so on. The Chinese think when a man has lived sixty years it is time to begin over again, so the man of sixty-one goes to number one and so on. Incense is burned before each by the worshipper and then the ailing one kneels and prays, while he holds in his hand a large wooden cup in which are a number of sticks, which he shakes and the first one falling out indicates the disease and remedy.

The patient also has given him a pair of sticks curved and flat on one side and round on the other. He is bidden throw them in the air and note the manner in which they fall: Both flat sides up indicate death; a flat and a round side indicate sickness and recovery and both round sides up indicate good health.

A New Part of the City.

On we went though streets still more narrow and it seemed as if we were passing over a narrow pathway bounded on each side by a conglomeration of houses, shops, stores, markets and all kinds of noisy Chinese life, while sights, sounds and smells of every sort greeted us on all sides. We saw men working in exquisite lacquer, making the beautiful productions in all colors and gold and all else that is beautiful. One shop we visited dealt in gorgeous manderin coats, heavily embroidered in gold and lace, but their goods are not very saleable, as modern dress is driving them out of style. Another place was turning out ebony carved furniture and from the prices offered the man probably earned from 15c to 25c a day. Several other places were working common long feathers of domestic fowls into various articles of use and adornment.

A transition was here noted as we passed through a nopening in a wall into the new city as it is called. The streets were a little wider, so that two men could pass each other without making it necessary for one to lie down while the other walked over him. We stopped at one place which made a specialty of ivory carving and among other curiosities the proprietor showed us an ivory ball inclosing twenty-eight smaller one, each loose and separate. All manner of curious and useful articles were in the stock and we were also interested in seeing the workmen using their tools.

On we went, getting into the old part of the city, till we came to an ancient wall which once surrounded the place. It was mostly of earth, with stone sides and was from twenty to twenty-five feet wide on top, so that a guard of soldiers could travel on it from one end to the other without trouble. On the high points cannon were mounted in bomb proof structures and to one of these we climbed and while we ate our lunch we enjoyed a fine panorama of cultivated fields, gardens, streams and mountains, presenting a very attractive picture. The long disused guncarriage made us a good seat, while the dismounted cannon lying around in the dirt told the story of a departed glory.

A Curious Clock.

The guide took us to an old building where we saw a clock which would be hard to duplicate. A large tank filled with water flowed into another and that in turn was emptied into another in which was a float, in the center of which was an upright stick projecting through a hole in the cover of the tank and on which the hours of the day were marked. The tanks are so constructed that it takes just so long to fill the last one, and the hours are correctly noted as the stick in the water rises. This was once the solemeans of telling the time and large placards were displayed from the building for the benefit of the public. As we left the building we again plunged into the crooked narrow streets, and pedestrians meeting us had to hug the walls closely as we passed by. We met many burden bearers and finely came to a row of buildings called by courtesy homes. I should want plenty of smelling salts and disinfectants if I had to remain in that vicinity long. We met one little woman carrying ten gallons of water in pails slung across her shoulders and she didn't seem to be overloaded either.

A Chinese Nunnery.

A unique affairs was a Chinese nunnery of the Chinese order. It was a queer conglomeration of buildings, temples, shrines, open courts, dormitories and the like. It houses 80 nuns, who enter for life and are not supposed to see the outside world again. They must eat no meat and are supposed to spend their time in meditation, worship and sitting around. We saw a number of them who were so dressed that it was hard to tell them from man, and convent life seemed to agree with them, as they looked ruddy and healthy and well fed.

The altars and shrines were not very elegant and had been in use a long time. Each morning one of the sisters delivers a sermon an hour long. This discourse outsiders may hear if they wish.

A City of the Dead.

A unique establishment was a place called the city of the dead. It was a rambling low brick structure around an open court, with sine alleys and containing about six hundred rooms. These rooms rent for $50 a year or $25 in gold, and are patronized by the wealthy Chinese, who take this means of honoring the memory of the departed. The body is placed in a solid casket of beautiful wood, the end of which is carved in imitation of a tulip and is very beautiful. The casket is in an inner apartment and beside a partition extending a part of the way across the room. In front of the partition is a large easy chair for the spirit of the dead to occupy and before it incense is kept constantly burning. Each morning tea is set in a cup for the spirit of the dead to drink, refreshments of a toothsome kind are offered in the same manner and the place is lavishly supplied with pewter candlesticks and large vessels of various kinds and fine china dishes, and each day they are supplied with good things for the departed and during the day are emptied, to be again refilled by the devoted survivors.

POULTRY CULTURE.

Article VI.

Range—The old methods of free range need not necessarily be changed. The fowls should not, however be allowed to run at will within the garden or in and about the farm buildings. Nothing is more aggravating or disgusting than to have the nice vegetables or beautiful flowers scratched up, and the doorsteps, the porch, the barn floor and the farm machienry fouled with poultry droppings. Separate the poultry also from the other live stock of the farm. This is easily accomplished when undertaken in a business-like manner.

If the fowls are to be kept near the farm buildings, provide ample range enclosed by modern poultry wire fencing. The latter requires ordinarily but a few posts, is easily put up and has a very neat appearance when in position.

Colony Plan—Another way of separating the fowls from the center of farm operations is to place the hen houses at a considerable distance from the farmstead, in a pasture where the fowls will have absolute range. The latter plan may entail some extra travel by the poultryman and there is the risk in some localities of depredations by foxes, hawks or other wild animals or by thieves. The young, strong farmer boy may find advantage in the second or so-called "colony plan," while the housewife will probably prefer the fenced enclosure near the farm house.

Marketing—Thirdly, the farmer is far too careless in the way he disposes of his poultry products. He is usually content to trade his eggs at the nearest grocery store, when, by a little effort, he could gain a select private trade which would pay far better. His pure bred stock of one breed of fowls in their well kept house and capacious grassy yards will be a great advertisement for his eggs products and uniform clean appearance of the eggs in their attractive package will prove an additional help to make sales.

Dressed Fowls—Then too in disposing of his fowls the farmer often sells the birds alive when by carefully dressing them on the farm and selling to his customers on orders, he could secure far better prices.

Market Supply—The idea of special poultry farm on a large scale is extending and large poultry plants are being freely established, but the great bulk of poultry products for the market will continue to come from the numberless small flocks scattered throughout the country upon the farms and in the villages.

It should be the purpose of the farmer to make poultry, as a part of his farm stock, play its part in the economy of the farm and render its full share of profit instead of being merely an appendage as it is now generally considered.

As a Special Business—The old style of general farming was based upon the idea of producing on the farm itself, as fully as possible, all the supplies required for use by the farm and its inhabitants. This plan has given way in modern times to the idea of diversification and specialization in the other callings and professions of men—H. A. McKeene, Secretary, Illinois Farmers' Institute.

WHAT THE ILLINOIS STUDENT LEARNS IN STUDY OF SOIL AND ITS PROBLEMS

Question of Profitable Soil Management Is Receiving Great Deal of Attention at Present Time from Farmers and Students.

By F. C. Bauer, Instructor in Soil Fertility.

Interest in the study of soils and the desire for information on the part of farmers and students upon questions of profitable soil management is receiving a great deal of attention at the present time. With the student this interest is shown by increased registration in courses at the state university in which he devotes considerable time to an exhaustive study of the soil and its problems.

During the present year 325 students have been registered in the general soil courses and 60 in more advanced work. The following is a very brief summary of these soil studies, which is considered in three general divisions; namely, soil physics and management, soil fertility, and soil biology.

The disintegration and grining up of solid rock masses into a thin unconsolidated covering of earth, and gathering into close contact the decaying remains of plant and animal life—organic matter—and regulating the presence of moisture and air in such a manner as to promote the presence and growth of bacteria, is the long and interesting history of soil formation. In plant growth the factors of food, moisture, heat, mechanical support, and freedom from biological enemies are partially or wholly dependent upon the character and condition of the soil. Each of the soil factors named above must be kept in proper balance to each other. This is the business of the farmer.

The possibilities of variations in soils are so great that the problem of the farmer becomes a difficult one. The kind of rock from which the soil was formed and the fineness to which it has been reduced, determines the abundance of the food supply and many of the physical characters that make an ideal soil. If soils are extremely fine (clay soils), they require far different methods of management than do coarser soils (sand soils). The fine soils will hold more moisture, they do not warm up so rapidly in spring and as such they do not make the best kind of home for the plant. The coarser soils do not hold enough moisture, they drain too easily, they may be too well aerated; in fact, theey present problems that are entirely different from those of fine soils. The many possible intermediate types of soils between these extremes, present their own problems. The business of the farmer is to make as nearly as possible ideal conditions for plant growth, from the materials which he has in hand or may procure. It is clearly seen from the above, that questions of tillage, including plowing, harrowing, rolling, cultivating, etc.; drainage and even the application of certain substances, such as limestone, to improve certain of these conditions are based upon science and must be studied thoroughly in order to understand soil conditions. By numerous experiments the student becomes familiar with possible soil conditions and learns the principles of fundamental soil management.

Again, the presence or absence of organic matter in the soil has much to do with the farmer's control of the soil. The proper abundance of organic matter gives the farmer better control of moisture conditions, plant food supply, bacterial activity, soil aeration and the ease with which soils may be farmed. In fact, active decaying organic matter gives life to the soil. The farmer has these factors largely under his control when he makes use of farm manures, catch and cover crops, and crop residues.

Bacterial activity in connection with both organic and inorganic matter is very important to plant growth in order to prepare plant food into forms which the plant can use. The richer the soil the greater the bacterial activity.

The question of soil fertility (plant food) deserves more attention than given above. In the class room and laboratory the student learns that there are ten essential elements of plant food, each of which the plant must have in order to grow. The student discovers in the laboratory from his analytical work with farm produce and soils that under average conditions there are only two of these elements which the soil cannot furnish in large enough quantities for maximum crop production, namely nitrogen and phosphorus. It is a part of the farmers' business to furnish these elements in the cheapest and most economical methods possible, and to practice a system of farming that will make available those abundant elements in the soil.

Farmers and investigators have been striving for a long time to find out just what are the better practices of soil management, including the problem mentioned above, and also the best methods of managing abnormal soils. Experiment fields have been established all over the state, that now throw light upon these problems.

Making an exhaustive study of these and other experimental fields from the literature, and by inspection of a number of Illinois fields, and from his laboratory investigations the student learns that organic matter under certain conditions, may be made to supply nitrogen to the soil as well as to make for better physical conditions as metioned above; that by establishing proper bacterial relations between soil and legume plants, large stores of nitrogen may be drawn to the soil from an inexhaustible supply in the atmosphere, (see cut of red clover) that phosphorus can be increased only by the application of some substance carrying this element, of which finely ground raw rock phosphate used in connection with the organic matter, has been found to be the cheapest and most economical source.

Under normal Illinois conditions the student learns that in order to put his soil upon permanent producing basis he must establish proper baterial life in the soil, and maintain the supply of plant food elements by a well planned rotation of crops, in which he makes liberal use of organic matter, limestone and phosphorus.

Understanding these principles, the farmer student goes to his farm, carefully collects soil samples, analyzes them, and then plans out a rotation of crops for the type of farming that meets the ideals in such a manner as to permanently enrich the soil. He plans every detail for years ahead, taking into consideration the investment in property and equipment, depreciation, taxes, interest, soil improvement, markets and probable profits per year.

The knowledge gained from such soil studies as these described above on the part of an increasing number of students, is bound to result in much good to the prosperity of both state and nation.

ON THE PROBLEM OF VOCATIONAL TRAINING

SECOND ARTICLE ON THIS SUBJECT BY EUGENE DAVENPORT.

Dean of College of Agriculture Declares There is No Such Thing as Average Student—Are Varied in Their Needs and Capacities—Technichal Education Needed.

In the latter part of the first article we stated that two principles are well established psychologically; the first is that the learning of one thing is no assurance of the knowledge of another, and the second is that two things can frequently be as easily learned as one, providing the proper relations be established between the two.

The whole matter raises the question of the proper educational unit. Generally in framing the courses of study, the unit of thought has been the ideal student, the individual should begin at the beginning, finish the course, and go on to the next higher school. This may be ideal, but it is not typical. The average student does not graduate from anything; indeed, in any proper sense of the term, there is no such thing as an average student. The truth is that students are as varied in their needs and capacities as are the characters of the human race and for this reason there is no type. The modern remedies proposed to correct our educational blunders recognize the vocation as the unit; they would have as many different schools as there are different occupations, very largely overlooking three important facts; first, that it is not wise to educate a man solely by means of his professional studies; second, that it is not wise to educate people of different prospective occupations separately and out of contact with each other, and third, that except in extremely dense populations it is impossible to support as many separate schools as there are occupations within the community, not to mention the fact that many ought to escape from the outside occupations.

Viewed from any angle, the rational unit of education is the community and its school; that is to say, a given community should have one secondary school. The size of this community should be limited by possible walking distance for the children except where it may be expedient to provide means of transportation; for every child of secondary school age should spend its evenings at home. Few communities of the size indicated can afford to maintain more than one really good school. This school must recognize and provide for the vocational needs of that community, and it may do this by inserting into its curriculum courses of study which are distinctly vocational as well as others which are distinctly non-vocational, and by requiring that every student shall select studies from both groups.

Briefly stated, every good secondary school should offer both general and technical instruction, the latter providing first for activities of that community and then, so far as can be afforded, for the activities of the race as a whole in order that the opportunities of its young people may be as broad as possible. Such a school is feasible. It can be supported financially and the student can reach it. Their education will consist of a reasonable blend of the general and particular, of the non-vocational and the vocational, of those studies which teach them what the world is doing and those other studies which inspire and train their own activities. Such a school will put men and women into life with a reasonable disposition to do something and with at least some preparation for doing it. These people will be in some sense recompensed for having been taken out of the community life of their elders and given over to the so-called educational process. It is true they will have lost something, but they will have gained more. All things considered there can be no better model for the public secondary school than the state university with its multiplied technical courses and its well-established principle of general education.

But what about the children who have to leave school prematurely? What about high schools? What about continuation schools? The only answer is: Let them be provided so far as the community needs can be anticipated and so far as means can be secured; but let them be provided by the same school and by the same administration responsible for the educational policy of the community. Let them be conducted in the ordinary school building, in hired buildings, in old sheds, or in shops, but let the conduct of this extra training be a part of the general educational policy of the neighborhood.

RAISING HEIFER CALVES FOR DAIRY

By R. S. Hulce, Assistant in Dairy Husbandry.

Question: Will you kindly send some specific directions for raising heifer calves for the dairy?

Answer: I will outline a general method of calf feeding and in putting it in use one must vary it to suit the particular case:

The calf should be left for one day after birth with the mother and then removed, this leaving the calf with the cow one day allows it to get the colostrum or first milk from the cow after freshening; from that time on the calf is fed from a pail. It is often necessary to let the calf suck one's finger in the milk in getting him started to drinking. Very often it is necessary to skip a feed after removing before he is hungry enough to take milk from the pail. An average calf at the start, will handle nine pounds of new milk daily, the milk being fed in three feeds of three pounds each; the amount to be increased as the calf will stand it until he is receiving twelve pounds of new milk daily. If feeding a calf whole milk from a cow whose milk has a high percentage of butter fat, more care will be necessary than if milk from a low testing cow is being used, due to the fact that milk with a high butter fat content has a tendency to produce digestive troubles. The feeding of the mother's milk for at least four or five days after freshening is weeks if possible; after this change to other milk should be more or less gradual. The feeding of the calf three times a day should be continued for a period of about two weeks if possible; after this, if if everything is doing well, twice a day is sufficient. The feeding of new milk should be continued until the calf is about four weeks of age, at which time one can commence to substitute skim milk gradually, the substitution being made at the rate of one pound daily, thus taking about two weeks to make the change to skim milk. If one has plenty of skiskim milk after the calf is well started, more than 12 pounds could be fed daily. The length of time which one will continue feeding skim milk will depend largely upon the supply at hand. If one has good roughages such as alfalfa or clover hay and is using a good grain mixture, the calf can be dropped gradually from skim milk when about 100 days of age. If plenty of skim milk is available it can be fed to advantage for a longer period.

It is a good plan to attempt to get the calf to take grain at an early age. The sifting of grain into the pail after the calf has eaten the milk is a good practice. We have calves that are less than two weeks old that nibble grain at the bottom of the pail. Whole oats make an excellent grain for calves. After the skim milk has been dropped, a good grain mixture might consist of one part whole oats, one part corn meal, one part wheat bran, and one part oil meal, feeding at about the rate that the calf will consume it. A calf three months old, if in normal condition, will handle about three pounds of grain a day. For roughages, as before stated, clover, or alfalfa hay are excelent as they furnish protein and lime, both of which are very excellent to a growing animal.

A great deal must be left to the judgment of the feeder. He should watch the calf carefully and as soon as any trouble of any kind is noticed the decreasing of the feed is very often advisable.

CROP CONDITIONS MAY 1, 1913

The United States department of agriculture estimates that "on May 1 the area of winter wheat to be harvested was about 30,938,000 acres, or 4.5 per cent (1,449,000 acres) less than the area planted last autumn, but 16.4 per cent (4,367,000 acres) more than the area harvested last year, viz 26,571,000 acres.

"The average condition of winter wheat on May 1 was 91.9, compared with 91.6 on April 1, 79.7 on May 1, 1912, and 85.6, the average for the past ten years on May 1.

"A condition of 91.9 per cent on May 1 is indicative of a yield per acre of aproximately 16.6 bushels, assuming average variations to prevail thereafter. On the estimated area to be harvested, 16.6 bushels per acre would produce 513,571,000 bushels, or 28.4 per cent more than in 1912, 19.3 per cent more than in 1911, and 18.3 per cent more than in 1910. The out-turn of the crop will probably be below the figures given above according as the change in conditions from May 1 to harvest is above or below the average change.

"The average condition of rye on May 1 was 91.0, compared with 89.3 on April 1, 87.5 on May 1, 1912, and 89.6, the average for the past ten years on May 1.

"The average condition of meadow (hay) lands on May 1 was 88.5, compared with 85.7 on May 1, 1912, and a ten year average on May 1 of 88.5.

Stocks of hay on farms May 1 are etsimated as 10,828,000 tons (14.9 per cent of crop), against 4,744,000 tons (8.6 per cent) on May 1, 1912, and 8,673,000 tons (12.6 per cent) on May 1, 1911.

"The average condition of pastures on May 1 was 87.1, compared with 81.7 on May 1, 1912, and a ten year avarage on May 1, of 86.1.

"Of spring wheat plowing 67.2 per cent was completed up to May 1, compared with 52.8 per cent on May 1, 1912, and a ten year average on May 6 of 65.7.

"Of spring plowing 67.2 per was completed up to May 1, compared with 48.9 per cent on May 1, 1912, and a seven year average on May 1 of 54.3."

TELLS THE FUNCTION OF THE WATERWAYS

ENGINEER OF STATE WATER SURVEY WRITES INTERESTING ARTICLE.

Two Extreme Views of Function of Streams Discussed—Both Contain Elements of Right and Yet Both Are Wrong—Purification of Water.

By Paul Hansen, Engineer, State Water Survey.

There is considerable misunderstanding regarding the functions of streams and since this lies at the base of further considerations, it must be dealt with first. One extreme view of the function of streams is that they are provided by nature for conveying water to the populations that live upon their banks to be used freely for all purposes for which water may be needed and that, therefore, no one has a right to defile streams by discharging into them impurities which may injure the health, reduce the value of the water in the stream for any purpose, or add to the discomfort of the water user at point lower down upon the stream. The other extreme view is that streams are our natural drainage courses and that they were provided by nature for carrying off all the wastes of human activity and that to deprive persons of the right to use streams is an injustice. In point of fact both of these views contain elements of right and yet both are wrong. The proper conception of a stream recognizes the dual function of watering the country through which it passes and of carrying off wastes.

Some pollution of streams is inevitable for with increased density of population, increased cultivation of the soil and increased numbers of urban communities it is practically impossible to prevent the discharge of all deleterious matter into streams. It is only reasonable to require that the grosser form of pollution be prevented. It, therefore, may be stated that no surface stream unless the entire watershed is controlled for the express purpose can be considered as fit for use as a domestic water supply without purification. Many of the smaller communities are in a position to derive their water supplies from wells, and where well water is unobjectionable because of mineral content and is beyond the danger of surfact contamination, this forms the safest and best of all water supplies. Most large towns and a great many small towns must, however, derive their water supplies from surfact streams. The question now arises: How much pollution may be permitted to enter a stream before the water thereof is rendered beyond redemption by water purification methods? This is a question that taxes the greatest ingenuity of sanitary experts. It is always dependent upon the peculiar character of local conditions and the best and most economical solution can only be obtained after careful expert investigation.

Merely to indicate the wide range of conditions that are met in actual practice, we have on the one hand the water purification plant constructed for the purpose of purifying crude though rather week sewage at the Chicago stock yards. There can be no question but that the results obtained at this plant were satisfactory when judged by the safety of the water for human consumption. Even though it is possible to transform such a filthy liquid into a drinking water, the esthetic sense of the community rebels and it is not probably that water so highly polluted will ever be considered as acceptable water for public water supplies even with purification. At the other extreme is the community which derives its supply from a clear mountain stream possibly having its source in large springs yielding a water of unquestioned purity. In such a case there would seem to be but trifling danger and authorities migh be tempted to omit purification of such a water. The disastrous results that may come from this omission is well illustrated by the experience in Plymouth, Pa., in 1885. In this case the source of water supply was a mountain stream such as above described with but two houses upon the entire drainage basis. Nevertheless a single case of typhoid in one of these houses was responsible for 1104 cases and 114 deaths among the consumers of the water.

THE SUMMER MEAT SUPPLY ON THE FARM

Practice of Buying Meat from a Retail Market Has Caused a Great Increase in the Cost of Living to the Farmer

By J. R. Wells, Assistant in Animal Husbandry.

Rural conditions of today, and the causes which have brought about these conditions, have resulted in a great decrease, if not the entire abandonment, in some cases, of the former practice existing among farmers of providing their own meat supply. These conditions have caused them to depend on the city market to a much greater extent than before. The farm value of meat producing animals has greatly increased and this fact has necessarily resulted in a greater cost of living for the farmer. It cannot be questioned, however, that the practice of buying meat from a retail market has caused a still further increase in this cost. A farmer may be certain that when he sells a live animal and then buys back the same meat perhaps, at retail prices, he has paid well for having it butchered and cut up for him.

A comparison of the live weight values and the dressed carcass values of meat animals is extremely interesting, in that it throws light on the factors that enter into the determination of the final retail price of meats. Figures and various estimates show that the value of a dressed carcass of beef at the regular wholesale price of the various cuts is less than the original value of the animal on foot. This means that the expenses and profits of the packer are paid for by the by-products, which, because of his equipment, the packer is able to use efficiently. The retail dealer therefore, actually obtains a carcass for less money than the live animal cost the packer. Government investigations have shown that the retail price of meat is from 17 to 50 per cent greater than the wholesale price. In the north central states, including Illinois, the government figures place this increase at 38 per cent, which is also the average of 50 cities scattered throughout the United States. Whether or not the percentage charged by the retail dealers is fair to the consumer need not be considered in this discussion, but it should be of interest to the farmer, for it means that meat at a market costs him considerably more than it would if he kept the animal at home and slaughtered it himself.

Another consideration which should influence the farmer to provide his own meat supply as much as a possible is the increased quality of the meat which he can obtain in this way, as compared with that found ordinarily in the country market. By first carefully selecting and feeding the animals and then by observing proper cleanlines in the slaughter and care of the meat, a product can be obtained which for wholesomeness and freshness cannot well be duplicated by large slaughtering establishments. A proof of this is the demand among the wealthy city people, and the fashionable caterers to the public, for such country products.

There are two methods open to the farmer by which he can supply his summer meat; first, by the use of smoked and cured meats; second, by providing some means for obtaining a regular supply of fresh meat. Some of the advantages of smoked meat are: (1) It can be prepared in the winter when there is little farm work to be done; (2) it will keep for a long period of time; (3) its fine quality and flavor as compared with the commercial article.

If a farmer expects to have fresh meat of his own during the summer, some efficient system of refrigeration is essential. Ice can be provided by the use of a small home ice house, or the ice can be purchased at retail from city dealers as it is needed. The relative economy of the two systems varies of course with the availability of natural ice in the winter, and the nearness and cheapness of a retail supply. An ice house sufficient for the needs of the average farm family need not be large or expensive. It should be square, so that when filled, the ice is in a cubical mass, thus exposing the minimum amount of surface to the air. There should be good insulation to protect it from external influences, such as heat and air. This insulation is readily obtained by packing a 12 inch layer of sawdust between the walls and the ice. Thorough drainage is necessary to prevent loss of insulation, and the ice should be packed so as to prevent any possible circulation of air through the mass. Ice put up in this manner keeps wells and is very economical.

The meats that can be used fresh depend to quite an extent upon the community in which a farmer lives. Full grown beef is rather difficult to handle, because of its large size. If enough farmers have facilities for storage, a co-operative scheme could be arranged that whole beeves could be slaughtered and utilized on the farm. Fewer farmers could buy a quarter of beef wholesale and divide it among themselves. Or a single farmer, if he is a skillful buyer and a good judge of meat, could no doubt save money by buying in larger quantities at the market and by so doing save considerable.

Lambs, veal and small lean hogs ought to play an important part in furnishing meat for the country table, as they are small, quickly dressed, not too large to be used economically, and can be provided by the farmer himself. If his family is not large enough to entirely use up a lamb, veal or small hog carcass while it can be kept fresh, any surplus could be easily disposed of to the neighbors at a profitable price. The veals could be grown to a weight of from 250 to 400 pounds, and fed out especially for the purpose. Small 125 to 175 hogs could be similarly provided and used entirely as fresh meat.

No doubt the supplying of both fresh and cured meat is the most ideal, as it provides variety and requires less work than to depend entirely on fresh meat. Detailed information as to the proper methods of slaughtering and curing meats can be obtained in the following bulletins: "Butchering Hogs on Missouri Farms," Missouri State Board of Agriculture Bulletin No. 11; "Meat on the Farm," Farmers' Bulletin No. 183, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS MARKED IMPROVEMENT

MANY SHARES LIFTED ABOVE PREVIOUS CLOSE.

Opening Prices Were Generally Higher—Heavy Selling of Atchison and Other Shares Eliminates Gains.

(By Associated Press)

New York, June 6.—Although not free from periods of unsettlement the stock market today showed a distinct improvement, culminating in an emphatic exhibition of strength which lifted many important shares well above the previous day's close. In certain quarters of the list, particularly among the specialties, there was evidence of forced selling which brought about some severe declines. The leaders, however, were in much better demand.

Opening prices were generally higher but the early gains were eliminated gradually as the market was undermined by heavy selling of Atchison, the petroleum shares, Canning and some other shares which developed weakness. The movement was accelerated by a sharp bear raid in which a number of new low records for the long decline were reached. The market quickly recovered, however, and influence of spirited buying of the leaders rose steadily to the end of the session.

A factor in bringing about the sharp upturn late in the day was the appearance of Washington advices stating there were no ground for recent rumors circulated in Wall street concerning the attitude of the administration toward certain large corporations. The chief demand for stocks, however, came from the shorts. The market appeared to have reached an oversold condition and the failure of the bears to indue fresh liquidation by raiding the market led to active covering.

SENSATIONAL DAMAGE REPORTS BOOST WHEAT

CONGESTION OF JULY OPTION ADD TO FEARS OF SHORTS.

Six Hundred Thousand Acres in Three Kansas Counties Said to Have Receded to a Condition of 50 Per Cent.

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, June 6.—Sensational crop damage reports from Kansas counties heretofore believed safe gave the wheat market today an upward whirl. The close was firm at an advance of ⅝ to ¾c net. Other leading staples all showed gains; corn a sixteenth to ⅛c; oats, ⅜ to ¼@⅜c, and provisions a shade to 20c.

Six hundred thousand acres of wheat in Salina, McPherson, Rice and Ellsworth counties, Kansas, which have been credited with an average condition of 82 per cent were declared by experts today to have receded to a condition of 50 per cent.

Because of hot winds, a huge share of the grain in the section named was asserted to be actually dead and the situation in general far worse than had been supposed.

Congestion in the July option has added to the fears of wheat shorts.

There were signs that July contracts were largely held by strong interests and might be forced to a stiff premium over September. On the other hand, St. Louis reported July there to be relatively weak, owing to the nearness of new wheat and because of threatened insurance difficulties. Profit-taking led to a decided setback at one stage but the upward tendency of prices was again in full swing as the session came to an end.

Corn received help chiefly from the wheat bulge. Attempts by a speculative leader to acquire a big line of September formed an additional bullish influence. Lightness of offerings allowed oats to climb unchecked.

Provisions advanced mainly owing to a sharp upturn in the hog market. Packers were buying July pork and ribs.

UNVEIL CANADIAN MEMORIAL

Hamilton, Ont., June 6.—Flashing a signal underseas by pressing an electric button in Buckingham palace, Queen Mary this afternoon unveiled a monument erected on the Stoney Creek battlefield to commemorate the victory of the British in the engagement with the Americans one hundred years ago today. The battle centenary was made the occasion for an all day celebration, in which militia, veterans' organizations, historical societies and official representatives of the dominion and provincial governments participated. Among the floral decorations placed on the graves of the soldier dead were several handsome wreaths sent from England by the Eighth King's Own, one of the regiments that took part in the battle of Stoney Creek.

New York, June 6.—American Lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis cup preliminary tie at the West Side Tennis club courts today. Maurice E. McLaughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 and R. Norris Williams 11., scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to clinch the American team's victory is to win one of three remaining matches and experts look for this to be accomplished tomorrow afternoon when McLaughlin and August Hackett meet, the Australian team. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team which has already eliminated the French racquet wielders in the quest for the international championship.

The play during the seven sets contested today proved conclusively that so far as the present competing teams are concerned, the American players have the edge on the contenders for the antipodes.

New York, June 6.—Six thousand ardent devotees of the game of tennis filed the temporary amphitheatre built about the courts of the West Side Tennis club this afternoon to witness the beginning of the blue-ribbon event of the year—the preliminary trial matches for the Dwight F. Davis International Challenge cup. The matches will continue over Saturday and Monday.

The contesting teams represent Australia and the United States. The winning team will be called upon to play the winner of the Franco-German tie and the winner of the second matches will in turn enter the final round and be opposed by either Canada, South Africa, or Belgium. The team that scores the victory in the final trial matches will have the honor of meeting the English team in the contests for the cup. England is now in possession of the coveted trophy by reason of her victory in Australia last year.

In the history of the cup contests, extending over a period of twelve years, the trophy never has been held outside of England, Australia and the United States. This fact adds to the importance of the trials between the United States and Australia, since it is generally asumed that either the one or the other of the two countries will meet the English team in the cup contests next fall.

The Australian and American teams are considered exceptionally well matched. The members of the Australian team are S. N. Doust, Horace Rice and A. B. Jones. All are seasoned matched players, and therefore will not be troubled by nervousness or anxiety. Doust, who is the captain of the team, is rated as the best racquet wielder in Australia and is a veteran of many championship competitions. Rice is a left-handed player and also a veteran at the game. He is a better singles player than doubles. Backhand drives are his specialty, and it is said he is capable of passing any volleyer with these strokes either side. Jones, the third member of the team, is said to be the best all-around player ever produced in Australia. His style is very similar to that of H. L. Doherty.

The Americans selected to play the Australians are Maurice E. McLoughlin of California, R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia and Harold H. Hackett and Raymond D. Little of New York. The team is considered expcetionally strong and well balanced. McLoughlin stands as No. 1 on the ranking list and holds the national championship in both singles and doubles, as well as other important titles. Williams, who is a student at Harvard, was the sensation of the past season, ranking No. 2 to McLoughlin. His chief victory was the winning of the national clay court championship at Pittsburgh. Hackett, the third member of the team, has a record as a doubles player that has never been duplicated on the American courts. He has held the national title and at times all of the important ones. Little, the fourth member of the American team, is one of the veterans of the game. He has figured in other international cup matches, and was also rated in the doubles with Hackett, with whom he has been playing steadily this season.

PROMINENT MINISTER AND AUTHOR VISITING IN CITY

Dr. Minot J. Savage, Leading Unitarian, Spending a Few Days With Relatives—Former Pastor of Church of Messiah, New York.

The Rev. Minot J. Savage, D. D., the author of over forty volumes on social and religious problems and liberal christianity, is spending a few days in the city the guest of Mrs. H. H. Hall of West College avenue. He is accompanied by Mrs. Savage. Dr. Savage is chiefly noted for his work in the Unitarian ministry, having occupied the pulpit of the Church of the Messiah in New York city and the Church of the Unity in Boston, two of the leading congregations of the country. Some of his well known books are "The Passing and the Permanent in Religion," "Christianity the Science of Manhood," "Social Problems," "The Evolution of Christianity" and "Life Beyond Death." He is not engaged in active work at present on account of ill health.

Dr. Savage, when asked about the status of Unitarianism in the United States, explained its comparatively slow growth by a comparison to the progress of early christianity. Just as the Unitarian movement is for the present an urban movement, the beginnings of the church were laid in the cities and were concerned with the select few. A "pagan" is etymologically a countryman and "heathen" is a term which at one time a heath-man or dweller of the heath. Although the Unitarian church has its stronghold in the east, there has been a substantial increase in the last few years of churches of that faith in the Mississippi valley and in the west.

The Rev. Minot J. Savage was born in 1841 in Maine and was graduated in 1864 from the Bangor Theological seminary. His first work as a minister was done in California under the Home Mission board of the Congregational church. After nine years in the ministry, he changed his belief and took a Unitarian charge in Chicago. From Chicago he went to Boston and from Boston to New York. He was pastor of the Church of the Unity twenty-two years and was in New York ten years. His son, the Rev. Maxwell Savage, is the Unitarian minister of Louisville and his son-in-law, the Rev. Minot Simons, holds the same position at Cleveland, O. Dr. and Mrs. Savage are located temporarily in Cleveland.

HARDRAKER TO REMAIN AT JACKSONVILLE STATE HOSPITAL

In the circuit court Friday Judge Thompson decided the habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of James A. Hardraker against him and Mr. Hardraker will continue an inmate of Jacksonville State hospital. In his plea it was set forth that Mr. Hardraker was not an insane person and that he was unjustly held in restraint at the state hospital. After hearing the argument and the testimony Judge Thompson made an order in which it is declared that Mr. Hardraker was properly committed to the hospital from Macon county and that he is not of sound mind.

ARRESTED FOR SPEEDING.

William Ricks was arrested Friday for speeding his automobile on South East street Thursday night. It is likely, however, that the case will be dismissed, as Ricks insists that the reason he drove beyond the lawful speed rate was because he had with him a call fireman who he was taking on the fire department run on South East street.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

During the heavy rain and electrical storm of Thursday afternoon a barn on the farm of Charles Young near Arcadia was struck by lightning and destroyed by fire. The barn contained a number of farming impiements and all were burned. The property was partly insured.

LETTER FROM Y. M. C. A. CAMP AT LAKE MATANZAS.

At 6 a. m. Smithy was there with the "get up" call on the bugle and everybody rolled out in a jiffy. Sis Walker failed to arise at the proper time and was given the slaperatus as his punishment.

Breakfast call was soon sounded and all hands were on deck with ravenous appetites and the food was soon a thing of ancient history.

Round table was called at 7:30, after which many things were discussed. "Round table" consists of singing gospel songs, scripture reading and prayer, after which comes the planning of the day's program. Three forms of punishment were decided on as penalties for leaving the screen doors open, over sleeping, etc. The first is the slaperatus, which is a large flat paddle, which is caused to descend with quite a velocity on the posterior portion of the guilty one's anatomy. The second is the chizmalee. The campers stand in a row in stride position while the guilty one crawls through on his hands and knees, receiving a slap on the thin side of his trousers as he goes under each fellow.

The third is the water cure. The guilty one is picked up by the hands and feet and gently tossed in the rippling waters of Matanzas.

The wood choppers for the day were J. Capps, Tobe Smith, Wait and Peruna Brew, and the wood certainly did fly. While this was going on Dr. Darr superintended the house cleaning down stairs, while Polly Smith was on the job on the second floor.

The morning was spent in fishing, without much success and all was quiet till the dinner bugle was sounded. Oh, that corn bread that Jackson baked for that occasion and how short a time it lasted.

In the afternoon swim Chili Capps and Smithy did the feature stunts by diving from the ladder of the swimming raft before it capsized. Recker and Darr made their first appearance in bathing suits, and from their handsome appearance and their graceful movements on the path to the lake they were unanimously dubbed the fairy queens.

At 4 o'clock the screen door rule went into effect and by supper time quite a few were eligible for both the slaparetus and chizamalee. After supper these punishments were properly administered.

After supper the music began and Mr. and Mrs. Dickson and several of the fellows from Oak Lodge cottage came over and we had a big musical program. Lizza Buzza wound up the program with several selections on the harp. At 10 o'clock the bugle was sounded and soon all were in bed and wandering in the vales of Slumberland.

Jane 6, 1913.

Threatening clouds hung over the sky all night and a strong north wind began to blow about bed time that caused all the mosquitoes to hunt their holes and the fellows to crawl in deeper between their blankets. Not until the blasts from Smithy's bugle vibrated in our ear drums did we know there was such a thing as life.

Breakfast was over without any mishaps of importance, except Jimmie Capps salted his rolled oats and Mulligan Recker put sugar and milk on his fried potatoes.

At round table Walker announced a scheduled ball game with the Oak Lodge Giants. Some new rules were formulated.

Just after round table the punishments were administered. Smithy used the slaparetus and quite a few were eligible for this pleasure, including Recker and Buzza. The chizmalee was then run off but there were no applicants for the lake.

Recker caused a lot of excitement by falling out of a boat into the lake. He was just a few feet from shore however, and the lake only raised a few inches. Fishing was a little better and each boat brought back a fair sized string.

Peach cobbler was on the bill of fare for dinner and yow yow how it did dissappear.

Baseball practice was the chief feature of the afternoon but the individual honors went to Williamson during the swim. He was demonstrating how to ride a barrel in the water when a sudden impulse seized him to made a sand digger out of himself and consequently he dredged the harbor with his nose.

At four o'clock the water-cure was given to those who were eligible. Jimmie Capps was first on the program then Adams, Chili Capps, Tobe Smith, UpDeGraff, Whitlock, Wait, and lastly the honorable horse-thief Buzza, with his bucaneer outfit on He was gently tossed out a bit farther than the rest and alighted very gracefully on the back of his neck.

Lizzie Marshall holds the record so far in long distance talking with Monk Wait a close second. Paschall and UpDeGraff are by far the noisiest guys in the crowd and some eratic measures are going to be taken to stop them.

Doctor Darr forgot that he had eaten one supper and absent mindly ate another or two from the way the food disappeared in his vicinity.

Heavy wind arose soon after supper and all boating was called off for the evening. A short song service ensued and then the rest of the evening was spent in reading and letter writing.

ELLIOTT STATE BANK

New Vault Work Completed—Will Open a Savings Department.

The new vault work at the Elliott State Bank has now been completed though there is still some work to be done in the way of mahogany finishing, alterations and changes of counters, furniture etc., to put the banking room in order and complete its arrangement for additional convenience and facilities of business.

The two new burglar-proof vaults installed for them by the Diebold Safe & Lock Co., are the most perfect work and in addition to their absolute safety and protection as regards fire and burglars, are marvels of beauty and skill as to workmanship, mechanism and finish to the smallest detail. The massive doors, with their beautiful finish, their mechanism and bolt work, equipped with two combination locks and three time locks on each door, are a pleasure to look at and impress one with a feeling of their impregnability and the absolute safety of what may be locked within when they are closed.

Notwithstanding that the vaults themselves are burglar proof, there are installed in the lower vault two new burglar proof safes, made for the place by the Diebold Company, of the latest, best and most perfect type—one of which the bank will use for the money and securities which are brought out daily to the tellers' cages for use in the current business of the day, and the other will be used for keeping the reserve fund, bonds, etc., of the bank and bonds belonging to customers and left in their charge.

The upper vault is equipped with safe deposit boxes of the latest and most approved type, the same as are found in the newest and best safe deposit companies in the large cities. Customers who wish this additional security may rent these safe deposit boxes; but the bank will be pleased to receive customers' boxes for safe keeping as heretofore without charge.

There is also a large storage vault in the basement where customers may store silverware and such articles of minor value, without charge.

The bank feels satisfied that they now have two of the best and safest vaults to be found anywhere and that they have provided for themselves and their customers all that can be desired in the way of protection and security.

As is well known, the Elliott State bank has accepted no interest bearing deposits for many years, believing that to be the best business policy and being amply able to provide for the requirements of their customers without. Now however, recognizing the fact that their friends and customers desire the opportunity to place savings deposits with them, and believing that it will be appreciated, this bank, as may be seen by their announcement elsewhere in this paper will open a savings department and will allow interest on savings deposits at rate of three per cent per annum beginning July 1st, 1913. Savings deposits will be received on and after June 16th, but interest will not begin to accrue until July 1st.

The bank will also issue time certificates of deposit bearing interest at rate of three per cent per annum.

The known responsibility of this bank and their record for safe and conservative business methods afford ample assurance of the absolute safety of deposits or other business entrusted to them.

PLANS DISCUSSED FOR FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

Retail Committee and Members of Driving Club Meet Friday Evening With Mr. Levy.

Members of the retail department of the Chamber of Commerce and the Jacksonville Driving club met at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters Friday evening with Mr. Levy of Chicago, representative of the United Fair Booking association, relative to the Fourth of July celebration in this city this year.

Mr. Levy represents a large booking agency that makes a specialty of booking attractions for fairs, summer carnivals and other amusements of that class. He has a large number of attractions and not a few cities have adopted the plan of giving out of door vaudeville.

The ones which the committee decided upon, tentatively, is Frank and True Rice who appear in a high class acrobatic and comedy act who also give another act known as "Lemkettle and Smithers in "Fun on a Haystack." As a second attraction they have LaTelle Brothers, who appear in a herculean, or strong act and in "Bumps and Bumps," a comeby knockabout acrobatic act. This means that each team will give two performances in the morning and two at night, making eight acts in all. This program has not been definitely decided upon as the matter will have to be taken before the directors of the Chamber of Commerce. The driving club is already making preparations for a racing matinee on the afternoon of the fourthe and expect to have one of the best programs ever given at the park.
